Wyoming, MI Public Safety Millage Renewal

for your polling location

In 2010, residents of Wyoming voted to fund a millage in support of public safety services in the City.

City representatives, administrators, employees and community members have worked together to re-engineer the way public safety services are delivered in Wyoming. These innovative changes have made the department more streamlined, and allowed emergency services to be delivered more quickly and at a lower cost for taxpayers.

In May 2013, Police Chief James Carmody became the Director of Police and Fire Services for the City. This combining of police and fire administrations was the result of research and understanding that allows the City to provide public safety services customized to the needs of Wyoming. Every ward and neighborhood is protected with police, fire and emergency medical response that has been optimized to provide service that meets the specific needs of each part of Wyoming.

The Wyoming City Council has approved a ballot question asking Wyoming residents whether or not to continue this service delivery model.

On Aug. 5, Wyoming residents will cast their votes. For information on polling locations, ballot language and more, visit www.mi.gov/vote.
